The Salmon process

In our previous written Hillsborough investigation update published earlier in July 2022, we advised you that we are applying the Salmon process to our investigations to ensure those individuals or organisations that are criticised in our reports are given the opportunity to respond, if they have not yet been given the opportunity to do so.

We also advised that we would provide you with more accurate information and anticipated timescales regarding the process as soon as we could.

We currently estimate that the Salmon process will begin early in 2023. While we still cannot be any more specific about how long the process may take, we will of course provide you with progress updates as soon as we are in a position to do so.
