Introduction

This document is a continuation of the pre-decision FAQs. This FAQs document provides information about what happens after a decision about your application for review is made.

To get information on what happens before a decision is made, please refer to our pre-decision FAQs.

3. After the review

3.1 What are the possible outcomes of a review?

All the evidence that you and the police supplied to the Independent Office for Police Conduct (IOPC) was looked at and we have made our decision.

If your complaint was not handled by the police force you complained against, please see the definition of 'appropriate authority' in this document.

The outcome of your application for review can either be 'upheld' or 'not upheld' (see the glossary below for a definition of these terms).

Upheld	Not upheld
If we uphold your review it means we consider that the outcome of your complaint was not reasonable and proportionate. We will explain why that is the case and state this within your decision letter.	If a review is not upheld it means we consider that the outcome of your complaint was reasonable and proportionate. We will explain why that is the case and state this within your decision letter. There is no right of appeal following a decision.

3.2 What happens if my application for review is upheld?

If we upheld your application for review, we may have told the local police force that they should investigate your complaint or we can also make recommendations to the appropriate authority (see the glossary below for a definition of this term).

A recommendation is an action that the IOPC proposes that the appropriate authority should carry out as a result of the review. Recommendations do not have to be followed.

We do not make recommendations in every case, even when we have upheld an application for review. We look at this on a case-by-case basis.

If we have made recommendations to the appropriate authority for example, a Paragraph 28ZA remedy, a referral to the Reflective Practice Review Process or Unsatisfactory Performance Procedures (see the glossary below for a definition of these terms), then they must consider them and respond to us.

3.3 What happens next if the IOPC makes a recommendation to an appropriate authority or when they are required to reinvestigate your complaints?

The police should contact you directly to notify you of the outcome of any recommendations we made. We will keep in touch with the appropriate authority to monitor its response.

Where a re-investigation has been undertaken by the police, the investigating officer should provide you with an update every 28 days. If you have not heard from them within 28 days, please contact them directly. At the conclusion of the reinvestigation, you will be offered a right of review to the Relevant Review Body (see the glossary below for a definition of this term).

3.4 Can I submit extra information following the decision?

No.

You cannot provide extra information once the IOPC decision has been made. The time when you submitted your application for review was your opportunity to provide us with all the necessary information for consideration.

3.5 The decision refers to ‘reasonable and proportionate’. What does this mean?

In deciding whether the outcome was reasonable and proportionate, we will look at what actions the investigating officer took to address your complaint, whether the investigating officer took into account any relevant legislation and guidance, whether the investigating officer engaged sufficiently with you in order to fully understand the complaint, whether the findings and determinations logically followed from the information or evidence obtained and whether the investigating officer identified any potential for learning.

3.6 What happens if I don't agree with the IOPC's decision?

All decisions the IOPC make are final.

There is no right to appeal against our decision following a review.

Our decisions can only be overturned by the courts through the judicial review process. Please note, there is a three month time limitation if you wish to judicially review an IOPC decision. You may wish to seek your own independent legal advice if you intend to pursue this course of action.

3.7 What happens if I don't agree with the local policing body's decision on my application for review?

If you have already submitted an application for review to the local policing body (see the glossary below for a definition of this term) as the correct Relevant Review Body, then you cannot submit another application for review to the IOPC about a decision already made.

If you have any questions or need more information about the local policing body's decision, please contact the person who considered your complaints so they can explain their reasoning and answer any questions that you have. Their details will be in the decision letter you received.

3.8 How do I complain about the conduct of the complaint handler who considered my complaints?

The IOPC cannot look at your complaint about the complaint handler's conduct or the service you received from them. If you wish to lodge a complaint against this person, you will need to contact the relevant Professional Standards Department of the police service. Their details should be in the cover letter you received or you may access the IOPC website for a complaint form.

3.9 Does the IOPC deal with compensation claims?

No.

The IOPC's remit does not cover claims for compensation from the police. If you want to pursue any financial claims against the police, you should contact the police force concerned. You can also contact your local Citizens Advice Bureau for more information or seek independent legal advice.

3.10 Can the IOPC make the police apologise to me?

No.

The IOPC can recommend that an apology is offered, but we cannot direct the police to provide this to you.

3.11 What happens if I'm not happy with the service I received from the IOPC?

If you are unhappy with the service you received, you can make a complaint to the IOPC Complaints & Feedback Team. A member of the team will assess your complaint and look at the service you received from our staff. They will not address any concerns or queries about decisions made by the IOPC. You can contact the IOPC Complaints & Feedback Team by sending an email to:

Appropriate authority (AA)

An AA is the authority responsible for considering complaints and it will tell you which organisation will deal with your review.

In most cases, the AA will be the chief officer of the police force about which dissatisfaction is expressed or, where a complaint relates to the conduct of an individual, the chief officer who has direction and control over that person. For most police forces, the chief officer is the Chief Constable. For the Metropolitan Police Service and City of London Police it is the Commissioner.

In some cases the AA could be the Local Policing Body (LPB). If a complaint relates to the conduct of a chief officer or acting chief officer, the appropriate authority is the Local Policing Body with responsibility for that police force area.

Local policing body (LPB)

For most areas the LPB is the Police and Crime Commissioner.

LPBs are responsible for carrying out reviews where they are the Relevant Review Body. LPBs may also have chosen to take on responsibility for certain additional functions in the initial handling of complaints and the provision of information to complainants that would otherwise be carried out by the chief officer as the AA.

Not Upheld

If your application for review is not upheld, it means we have agreed that the outcome of your complaint was reasonable and proportionate. Please note, there is no further right of appeal against that decision or option to change the outcome as it is final (please refer to point 3.6 above).

Paragraph 28ZA remedy

This is an action that the AA can and should take as part of the outcome of handling of the complaint to remedy your dissatisfaction. They can provide a remedy where something has gone wrong for example, when a failing has occurred, or the service has not been adequate. An effective and timely remedy demonstrates accountability and helps rebuild trust in the police and secures confidence in the complaints system. It can take the form of an apology, returning seized property, reviewing information on police databases or records, providing mediation, holding a service improvement meeting (this list is not exhaustive).

Recommendations

Recommendations may be issued by the IOPC to an AA when an application for review is upheld. A recommendation is an action the IOPC advises the AA to carry out as a result of the review. The AA must consider the recommendation from the IOPC and respond to the IOPC but does not necessarily have to implement the recommendation. It is expected that recommendations will be complied with unless there is a good reason not to.

Reflective Practice Review Process (RPRP)

The Reflective Practice Review Process is not a disciplinary process or a disciplinary outcome. It is intended to provide an open environment to encourage all those involved in the process to reflect, learn and, where necessary, put things right and prevent any issues identified from re-occurring. It only applies to police officers, not police staff.

Relevant review body (RRB)

A RRB is the organisation that will deal with your application for review.

There is a right of review to the RRB following the AA's outcome of a recorded complaint whether this be by way of an investigation, or by other handling.

The right to apply for a review is to either the LPB or the IOPC.

The IOPC is the RRB for complaints where:

- i) The appropriate authority is a local policing body
- ii) The complaint is about the conduct of a senior officer (an officer holding a rank above chief superintendent)
- iii) The appropriate authority is unable to satisfy itself, from the complaint alone, that the conduct complained of (if it were proved) would not justify the bringing of criminal or disciplinary proceedings or would not involve the infringement of a person's rights under Article 2 or 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights
- iv) The complaint has been, or must be, referred to the IOPC
- v) The IOPC is treating the complaint as having been referred (also known as the 'power of initiative', see paragraphs 9.36 – 9.39 of the Statutory Guidance)
- vi) The complaint arises from the same incident as a complaint falling within ii-v
- vii) Any part of the complaint falls within ii-vi

The LPB is the RRB for any complaints that don't match the list of circumstances above.

Unsatisfactory Performance Procedures (UPP)

The purpose of UPP is to improve the performance of individuals and the overall performance of the force. It does not apply to senior officers, police staff or contracted staff. UPP is different from misconduct and gross misconduct. It concerns the officer or special constable's inability or failure to perform their role to a satisfactory level. Their performance may be unsatisfactory but not breach the police Standards of Professional Behaviour.

Upheld

If we upheld your application for review, we agree that the outcome of your complaint was not reasonable and proportionate. We will state in your decision letter that it is necessary for the AA to either:

- re-investigate your complaints or
- consider our recommendation for disciplinary action or proceedings and/or
- consider our recommendation for a Paragraph 28ZA remedy, a referral to the Reflective Practice Review Process or Unsatisfactory Performance Procedures (see glossary above for a definition of these terms).
